Community Kitchen

St. Cyprian's has begun developing plans for a new Community Kitchen in collaboration with the University of San Francisco and our surrounding neighborhoods. In this space we will strive not only to feed hungry people but also to nurture intergenerational, interfaith, and multicultural community.

History of St. Cyprian's Episcopal Church

On December 10, 2010, St. Cyprian's will celebrate its 50th anniversary in the church building at the corner of Turk and Lyon streets in San Francisco. St. Cyprian's history, however, reaches back into the 1870s when a small group of African-American Episcopalians founded Christ Mission. After the close of Christ Mission, the remaining church members and their families revitalized their quest to obtain their own church. In 1923 St. Cyprian's held its first formal Eucharist in the Chapel of Grace at Grace Cathedral. With ever increasing numbers as more African-Americans moved west and Anglican immigrants arrived from the Caribbean, by the late 1930s St. Cyprian's had found a home in a converted house on the corner of Lyon and Sutter streets in the bustling Fillmore neighborhood. By 1960, with over 350 members and under the heroic leadership of the Reverend

E.A. McLaughlin, St. Cyprian's had moved to its current location on the corner of Turk and Lyon. Since that time the community and neighborhood have experienced enormous change. With passion, commitment, and courage, the St. Cyprian's community reached out by starting a job training program for youth in the late 1960s and early '70s, and a needle exchange program in the 1990s. Numerous clergy and lay leaders helped in these efforts. An expanded history of St. Cyprian's is now being gathered.

One inspiring occasion in our more recent history was the visit of the Anglican Communion's first female bishop, the Right Reverend Barbara Harris, prior to her consecration in 1989. Today, St. Cyprian's is seeking to connect with those surrounding us, college students and seniors, young families and singles of diverse backgrounds and economic situations.
